ABOUT

Adam Kujawa is a well-trained and versatile violinist based in Nashville, Tennessee, with extensive experience across a wide set of musical styles.

Adam has recently returned from serving as concertmaster of the national tour of Anastasia: The New Broadway Musical, where he performed for millions in sold-out performances across the US and Canada.

Holding dual degrees from Belmont University and a Master of Music degree in Violin Performance from Middle Tennessee State University, Adam has studied extensively with jazz musicians, country artists, and members of renowned symphonies.

He has been featured in music videos, numerous recordings, and television specials, and continues to perform with symphonies, chamber groups, pit orchestras, and live string sections, where he is routinely selected as a principal player.
